

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

AGS General Studies Business Administration

1. Accountant

Accountants are good with numbers, detail oriented, and enjoy helping others. They work with both people and companies to make sense of their money and taxes. Accountants prepare financial documents and ensure that tax operations go smoothly.

2. Financial Advisor

Much like accountants, financial advisors are charged with ensuring the financial health of people and companies. However, financial advisors do not work with taxes. Instead, they manage, allocate, and use money to make people and businesses successful. Financial advisors also help people and companies to make smart financial decisions by helping them to assess risk.

3. Marketer

Marketers plan, direct, and coordinate marketing efforts for businesses. They are charged with determining demand for goods and services as well as developing a strategy to maximize profits on those goods and services. Marketers oversee the development of product and monitor trends within the business' target markets.

4. Commodities Trader

Whether on behalf of a firm or an individual, commodities traders buy and sell commodity contracts. Commodities can be anything from oranges to shoe laces and they are bought and sold as futures, options, and other financial derivatives. Commodities traders are organized, detail-oriented people with a solid understanding of economics and business.

5. Human Resources

People who work in human resources are charged with ensuring the safety and happiness of a company's employees. Human resource managers work to hire new employee, as well as maintaining employee records and policies, counseling and disciplining employees, and handling scheduling.

6. Loan Officer

Loan Officers work in banks and lending companies to evaluate, authorize, and recommend approval or denial of loans to people and businesses. Loan officers generally have a solid finance background and are good with numbers and money.

7. Real Estate Agent

Real estate brokers or agents are people who help others to buy, sell, and rent properties. Brokers are licensed to work on their own, while agents must work for a licensed broker. There are two types of real estate brokers or agents, commercial and residential. Although real estate agents must go through licensing exams, having a BBA is a good first step to becoming an agent.

8. Manager

At every level of business, there are managers who keep things running smoothly. They are in charge of everything from running the day-to-day operations of a retail store to sourcing materials for large production facilities. No matter what type of business you would like to work in, if you're hoping to enter into management, a BBA can give you the necessary tools to succeed.

9. Entrepreneur

Entrepreneurs are individuals who organize and operate businesses. They generally create a new business and are both creative and organized. In the past couple of decades, with the rise of the internet, entrepreneurs have become more and more common. Entrepreneurs are behind start-ups everywhere.
