

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

ASLT Louisiana Transfer General Business

IT project manager

Project managers in the IT field create project plans for the development of new products and releases. They ensure that departments work together to meet deadlines, perform tasks, allocate resources appropriately, and maintain quality. What you'd make: $84,725 per year

Regional sales manager

Sales managers establish goals and quotas and analyze staff sales statistics to determine opportunities. They may also direct sales training programs. What you'd make: $78,325 per year

Senior financial analyst

Business degree jobs tend to involve data—plenty of it. In this job, you'd analyze data affecting companies' investment programs. What you'd make: $77,300 per year

Construction project manager

Construction project managers typically create budgets and plans for developing or maintaining buildings, roads, bridges, and other structures. What you'd make: $70,873 per year

Media supervisor

Media supervisors oversee media researchers, buyers, and planners and make sure the right ads appear on the Internet, in newspapers, during radio and TV shows, or anywhere else advertising can appear. Their goal is to spend a company's media budget in the most productive way possible. What you'd make: $70,093 per year

Business development manager

These business professionals find and take advantage of business opportunities, either by optimizing current revenue streams or by developing new ones. They identify key strategic partnerships, gather information on customers and competitors, and understand their industry's competitive landscape. What you'd make: $70,091 per year

IT business analyst

Business analysts define requirements for how an IT system should work and then communicate those requirements to the technical staff.

What you'd make: $67,527 per year

Senior accountant

What you'd do: Accountants analyze financial data to determine profit, loss, and liability. What you'd make: $64,766 per year

Hotel general manager

There's not much hotel managers don't do—they plan and manage most activities related to the day-to-day operations of the hotels they manage.

What you'd make: $53,835 per year

Account executive

Account executives work in a number of industries. They typically manage business relationships between their companies and customers. Sales savvy, relationship management, and product knowledge are all must-have skills. What you'd make: $50,294 per year